You ever wanted a different kind of relationship? Something a little better than what you had, or who you were? A person that had dreams and aspirations larger than your own, so that maybe one day you too could become different? Well so did Chandler, Triston, Chase, and Colby. Being born and raised in the hood, they've spent most of their lives chasing the block, so finding a woman from the projects just isn't going to cut it for them. Having already ran through girl after girl from around the way, they're reluctant to dive into a real relationship with any chick that is from the hood. Little did they know, their hearts had something else in mind for them all. Something similar to loud, ghetto, confrontational women that grew up on the same streets as they did. The men had come in contact with them on numerous occasions before, just not romantically. So they're caught completely off guard when they begin to catch feelings for them. Brooke, Frankie, Brandasia, and Bianca are four best friends that depend on each other no matter what. They've been through it all together. That's why when Triston, Colby, and Chandler swoop they begin acting like love struck teenagers and problems begin to form. Because they all desire happy endings, and are eager to have them with boys from the hood, betrayal and secrets begin to unravel their friendship. Albeit the word forever means a lot when it comes after friend, it has nothing on jealousy, envy, and hatred. What do you do when you've fallen in love with the very thing you don't want? Do you fight the feeling and keep it moving, or do you throw caution to the wind and take this love head on? Find out just what happens when these two sets of friends are IN TOO DEEP
