Excerpt: ... 110 THE PRESENT OF FALCONS to be present and an interpreter was to be found. When all had been arranged the envoy made a delay of some days on account of the Englishman's illness. And now it became noised abroad that the princes [of the enemy] had gathered together and reproached him [i.e. Richard] vehemently, saying that he had been the cause of a most urgent peril to the Christian religion.* But his envoy returning [to us] a little later delivered us this message in his name: "Do not imagine that I have been delayed in this business for the reason that is currently reported. For the reins of my rule have been delivered into my hand; and I am the arbiter of my own affairs and subject to the will of no one. But at this time a grievous distemper has seized me so that I am not able to stir. This is the sole cause of my delay. Now it is the wont of kings when they are near to send one another gifts, and I have a present that will not be unpleasing to the Sultan, whom I beg to grant me an opportunity of offering it." To this proposal Al Adil consented on condition of being allowed to make a present in return; and the envoy, agreeing, began again: "Our gift consists of certain falcons f which have been * This is corroborated by William 1c Breton, who says that Richard was sending frequent messengers to Saladin. (lifts were also passing between them, and for this reason Philip began to suspect his comrade. Bohadin tells us how Richard's envoys came to the Saracen camp for fruit and snow; and Roger of Howden makes Saladin send pears and Pyra Damascena [damsons] and other fruits to Richard and Philip soon after the former's landing. f The Western princes did not leave behind them their love AND AL-ADIVS WISDOM. Ill brought from beyond the sea. These are unwell now; and ...
