Understanding Women: Unspoken Words Speak the Most

Before attempting any kind of move to attract or impress a woman, a man must have a thorough understanding of what's running in her mind. Indeed, understanding the nature of woman is the key that unlocks possibilities even for an average guy.

For both sexes, the opposite sex is just complicated. This is because males and females use different lenses that make them see things differently as well. Nonetheless, trying to win a woman's attention and later on affection, does not require a man to change his entire perspective and way of life. The only thing necessary is to have an understanding adequate to make a woman feel acknowledged and valued.

Unspoken Words Speak the Most

Studies reveal that women are better equipped with decoding and sending non-verbal cues than males (Pease and Pease, 2004). Hence, it pays to concentrate on a woman's bodily movements (and not just her body features) to have a full grasp of what she is really trying to say. While men are direct and simplistic when sending verbal and non-verbal cues, women are fond of doing otherwise.

Men usually believe that they are the ones doing the first move most of the time; nonetheless, studies reveal otherwise. Indeed, it was found that 90% of the time, women perform as the initiator in courtship encounters. Women send subtle facial, eye and body signals to men before they can even make the move. Since men are not so good in reading non-verbal cues, they do not usually decode a go signal in an instant. Also, men have the tendency to misread women's smiles and friendliness as sexual interest signals.

Women's non-verbal messages are so subtle that most men think that they are the one's controlling the courtship and attraction process. Nevertheless, in an actual situation, females first send the signal and men's initial reactions are most of the time their response to such signal sent by the females. Women's deceptive and subtle signals are their means to see whether the man is worthy of pursuance or not.

To understand women, one must realize that recognizing and decoding their body language is crucial. Although men, generally, have little talent in reading non-verbal cues, learning is always possible. The first step towards a better decoding is knowing where to look at. Women are fond of bombarding men with series of non-verbal messages; hence, it is best to first focus on the most significant ones.
